The Duke read the letter and then he got the ribbon.

The Duke remembered Lady de Winter at the ball. He told D'Artagnan.

The Duke bought two new diamonds and he put them on the ribbon. He gave the ribbon to D'Artagnan.

"Thank you for your help," the Duke said. "Take this money and buy a new horse."

D'Artagnan was very happy. He took the ribbon to the Queen in Paris.

"Thank you, D'Artagnan. You're very brave," she said, and she gave him a diamond ring.

Before the ball, the Cardinal gave the two diamonds from the ribbon to the King. The King went to the Queen and said, "I'm very angry. Look at this!"

"What is it?" she asked.

"You know that these are two diamonds from your ribbon!" the King shouted. "The Cardinal says that the Duke of Buckingham has the ribbon with the other ten diamonds!"

"The Duke of Buckingham?" the Queen said. "I don't understand. Wait!"

She went to her room and returned with her ribbon.
