

Chapter 9: At the House

Jason ran to the back of the house and looked in the windows. He saw two men in one of the rooms.

“They were the painters at school and they’re angry about something,” he thought. “What are they saying?”

Jason carefully pushed the window and it opened about five centimetres. Suddenly, he heard their conversation.

“... didn’t want to leave her at the school,” one man said. “She saw us!”

“But what are we going to do with her now? We can’t leave her in the cellar!” the other man said.

“We’ll worry about that later,” said the first man. “Let’s put the computers downstairs and then go and meet Jenkins. He’s waiting for us.”

cellar

مרתف / قيو

downstairs

لمتو / إلى الطابق الأسفل

Jason returned to his friends. “We’re very good detectives,” he said. “The two painters from the school are here and they’ve got Amy in the cellar.”

“Let’s call the police again,” said Linda.

“The police didn’t want to know about Amy,” Dave said. “I don’t think they’re going to believe us now.”

“Well, the thieves are going to put the computers in the cellar and then they’re leaving,” Jason said. “They’re going to meet a man called Jenkins.”

“OK, we’ll watch them and wait,” said Dave. “We can go into the house later.”

What two things are the teenagers planning to do?

