DOG TALK

Do you want a dog? Before you ask your parents for a dog, learn how to understand dogs. Here are a few things that can help you:

- 1. The dog is looking at you and its tail is up in the air.

The dog feels happy. The dog is telling you that everything is all right.

- 2. The dog's tail is between its legs and it is licking* its nose.

The dog feels scared. Dogs sometimes bite* people when they feel like this, so be very careful. When the dog's tail goes up again, touch the dog under its mouth. You are asking, "Can I be your friend?". When the dog licks your hand, its answer is "Yes".

- 3. The dog has a toy in its mouth. You ask, "Can I play with you?" and pull at the toy. But the dog puts its head down and shows its teeth.

The dog is telling you not to touch the toy. It is ready to fight. Wait for the dog to bring the toy to you.

- 4. The dog's front legs are down on the floor and its tail is wagging*. Its ears are up and the dog looks like it's smiling.

The dog is saying, "Play with me, please."

Now you can have some fun with your pet!

Music for Pets

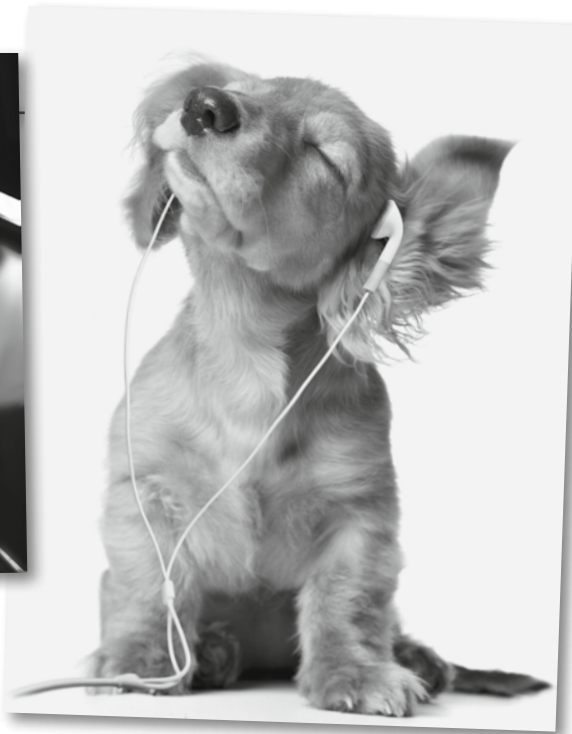

Does your dog start to bark when it hears music on the radio? Does your cat get angry when you play your favorite CD? Some people believe that animals have their favorite music.

“My dog, Buster, loves pop music,” says Kate Milton from Chicago. “Buster listens to CDs for hours. Sometimes we can’t change the CD because she gets angry. She just sits in front of our CD player*. It’s terrible! She thinks the CD player is hers.”

Amelia Shelly has two CD collections*. “I like pop music, but my cat, Pepper, only likes classical music,” she explains. “So the pop CDs are mine and the classical CDs are his. Pepper doesn’t like to be alone in the house. It’s boring. So, when I go to school, I turn on* the radio or play some of his CDs. Then he’s happy.”

Galaxie Music says that many pets like to listen to music when they are alone. They say that 53% of people with pets in the USA turn on the radio or television for their pets while they are at work or school.

So the next time you go out, think of your pet. Before you leave, turn on his or her favourite music.
